

We have only to look to Italy as an example of what happens when the media is owned by a single monopoly. Diversity and independence in the media are essential components of a democracy.